

Shi'ite Authors On Ethics and Morals

<"xml encoding="UTF-8?>

The first among the Shi'ite to write on this subject was Amir-ul-Mu'minin Imam Ali bin Abi Talib(A.S.). His letter to Malek al-Ashtar describes in detail what a ruler has to do and what rules of conduct he should follow. This is an unparalleled piece of writing. Every ruler who desire to know real political theory and loves justice should commit the contents of this letter to his memory and act in accordance with them. Then, his will to his Muhammad bin al-Hanafiyyah is another comprehensive piece of writing in this field. This has been mentioned by Najashi who got this data from Asbagh bin Nabatah. An-Najashi has also given the name of authorities.

Similarly his very lengthy will to his son Imam Hasan(A.S.) is of the same type. He wrote this will in the presence of the audience after he returned from Siffin. It is said about this will that, had there been any piece of wisdom that deserved to be written in gold, would be this will. It is included in Nahj-ul-Balaghah. In addition to these two pieces, there are the contents of Nahj-ul-Balaghah which have been collected by Sharif Ar-Radi and those of Ghurar-ul-Hikam Wa Durur-il-Kilam, compiled by Al-Aamidi, that bear on this subject.

There are sermons, speeches, wills and letters which are rich and sufficient (on morals etc.). This book shone like the shining of the sun and led the people to itself through its qualities, so much so that it is said to be the superior most piece as compared to the creations of human being except that of the Prophet.

Among other writings in this field is Risalat al-Huquq by Imam Zainul Abidin(A.S.), which has been mentioned alongwith its authorities in some of the Shi'ite books on Ethics and Morals which are found in print. Some of the contemporary scholars have abridged it and it has repeatedly been published in its abridged form.

All the Shi'ite books of the Tradition contain a special chapter on Ethics and Morals which is quite comprehensive. From among our scholars, the first one to prepare a book on this subject was Isma'il bin Mahran bin Nasr Sukuni. An-Najashi has mentioned a book of his on this subject titled Sifat-ul-Mu'min-i-Wal-Fajir. He died towards the end of the second century. The :other writers in this field are
